VALTURA is known for its rich cultural and historical heritage. The most valuable discovery is Nezakcij, archaeologist site, which is situated only 2 km away from Valtura and is one of the favourite destinations for archaeologists. Nezakcijska fort was designed in the Bronze Age. It was a political and religious centre of the tribal alliance Histrians and their capital. In 177 B.C. a decisive battle between the Romans and Histrians played out at this location. After the Roman conquest Nezakcij became a military reconnaissance stations. Valtura is also famous for its neo-Gothic church of St. John the Evangelist, which was built in 1899 at the site of an even older church that dates from 1630. Also famous is Church of the Blessed Virgin Mary with its Gothic inscription from 14th century.

MOTOVUN - according to legend, Motovun was built by giants, of which the most famous is Giant Joze. Its history begins in the time of Celts, who raised its settlement sekusi at the place of nowadays Motovun. This ancient Istrian town located on the top of 277 meter high hill, whose appearance derives from the 12th and 13th century. To the top of Motovun hill, to its Venetian town square, leads "The longest flight" with 1052 stairs. Motovun is a birthplace of the ship's screws inventor Josef Ressel, whose motive propeller became the trademark of international Motovun film festival, successfully hosted here since 1999. Surrounding provides the ability to walk through the Motovun woods, where you can find truffle mushrooms - excellent gourmet specialty, vineyards on the south-western slopes of the hill, and hunting and bike rides. In this area thrives Motovun's Grape Teran, Pinot and Malvasia.

BRIJUNI ISLANDS, situated along the southwestern coast of Istria, were proclaimed a national park in 1983. They cover an area of 2,700 acres, and total fourteen larger and small islands, of which the largest are Veliki and Mali Brijuni. The islands abound with Mediterranean and sub-Mediterranean vegetation, where tourists can take in the surroundings of untouched nature. The island has a zoo, pheasant farm and safari park with numerous diverse forms of animal life from throughout the world. Traces of human inhabitation on the island date back to the earlier neolithic period and among the many archaeological sites, the most significant is the pre-historic settlement on Gradina hill. Remains of a typical summer residence and temple from Roman times in the Verige Gulf, and on the western shore, very valuable ruins dating from the late ancient-Byzantine period and the Byzantine basilica of St. Mary dating from the sixth century are located on the western coast of the island.
